

Andrew James Ott, DPM

Associate, American College of Foot and Ankle Surgeons

- Born and raised in the Hillsboro, IL area where he was a standout athlete for Hillsboro High School. He graduated in 2005.
- Attended Blackburn College where he played football and was awarded all-conference honors and was a semi-finalist for the National Football Foundation William V. Cambell trophy.
- Graduated summa cum laude from Blackburn College in 2009 with a major in biology and a minor in chemistry.
- Attended Des Moines University on a Merit Scholarship
 - Class Vice President
 - Teaching assistant at the medical school for the physical diagnosis class and lower extremity anatomy course.
 - Member of the Council of Presidents and Curriculum Committee
- Graduated in 2014 – Doctorate in Podiatric Medicine and Surgery
- Residency in New York City at New York Presbyterian Queens (including two hospitals in Queens, one surgery center in Queens, two surgery centers in Manhattan, and one surgery center in Long Island) performing all aspects of general podiatry with an emphasis in reconstructive foot and ankle surgery
 - Chief Resident in final year of residency
 - As a third year resident, he was awarded the highest score in the country on the American Board of Podiatric Medicine in Training exam.